Being 'liable' means being legally responsible for something. This is the case as far as the law allows, whether the loss, damage or inconvenience comes from contract, 'tort', or any other source. 'Tort' is the name given to an area of law related to people who are in positions of responsibility. It makes them liable if they don't carry out the legal obligations that go with their positions.

We're not liable for:

- When we can or can't provide a service

- Loss of use or corruption of software, data or information;
- Loss or damage to goodwill;
- Any information, material, goods and services obtained through the website

Any loss, damage or inconvenience of any kind incurred as a result of the use of the Website, any information provided on the Website or the information provided through our services. Your use of the Website, your reliance on any information on the Website and through our products and services is solely at your own risk.

We can still be liable for death or personal injury caused by 'negligence'. Negligence is when an organisation or person fails to take the care they should take when they do something. We can also be liable for fraud or 'fraudulent misrepresentation', which is when someone says things they know aren't true for their own benefit.
